Underutilization of Mental Health Services among Older Asian American New Yorkers:
A Researcher's Perspective

Dr. Cho's research focuses on mental health issues such as depression and stress adaptation with chronic illnesses among older adults and their caregivers in Asian American and other minority communities of New York City. She has a particular interest in disparities in mental health services use among elderly Asian Americans. Professor Cho will describe the challenges and barriers she has encountered in conducting her research as well as strategies for gaining access to research subjects in these communities.
