Little Sallie Walker: The Impact of Rituals of Play on Black Women

Dr. Marta Effinger-Crichlow will discuss her film project, Little Sallie Walker. This feature-length documentary, which is still in-production, celebrates how Black women found pleasure, refuge and power through childhood play. While the title of the film is inspired by the classic circle game, Effinger-Crichlow will describe how the women of Little Sallie Walker in Selma, AL, Los Angeles, CA, Seattle—Tacoma, WA, and New York City were not bound by one type of play. Their infinite imagining evokes memories of both pleasure and pain and shapes how these women view American society and their positions within it.
