Linking Effective Teaching to the Course Syllabus

Do you want to prepare an effective, pedagogically sound syllabus for your courses?

Have you considered establishing clear relationships between course objectives, student assessment, and evaluations of teaching effectiveness?

Are you considering creating a syllabus for your writing-intensive course?

Join us for a conversation about establishing clear relationships between course objectives and student performance as you begin to plan for next semester’s courses.

DATE: Wednesday, December 8, 2010
TIME: 1:00p.m. - 2:15p.m.
VENUE: Rm. N227

Lunch will be served.
http://facultycommons.citytech.cuny.edu
RSVP is encouraged to facultycommons@citytech.cuny.edu.

Professors Ezra Halleck and Jonathan Natov from the Mathematics Department will join Professor Benjamin Shepard of Human Services to share their insightful approaches to constructing effective syllabi.