CUNY Service Corps Faculty-led Projects

Dear Faculty,

I am pleased to inform you that CUNY Service Corps is inviting City Tech faculty members to engage students to work on service-oriented projects for the 2015-16 academic year. The Faculty Application Deadline is Friday, March 20, 2015. If faculty members have projects that will provide meaningful work experiences for students, please apply now! Meaningful work experiences can include: conducting source-point tests and collecting samples (air, water, and soil) in residential and commercial settings; enrolling in a Housing and Community Problem Solving Internship course on campus and participating in an action-based research project; planning lessons and activities in an after school seminar for high school students; and participating in research-at the campus, including conducting literature reviews, transcribing interviews and class audio-recordings, writing field notes, and managing the data for the project. Faculty-led projects should seek to impact the short and long-term civic, economic or environmental sustainability of New York City and its residents and communities.

Important facts about faculty-led service projects:

- Priority will be given to projects that will enable Corps members to obtain academic credit, either through an existing course, an independent study, or some other arrangement
- Each faculty-led service project should involve a minimum of 3 Corps members
- Corps members are committed to work for a period of 24 weeks (over the fall and spring semesters) for 12 hours per week
- Faculty supervisors do not have to be based at one of the eight participating CUNY colleges; Corps members are expected to commute to the faculty supervisor's home college for project-related work

The faculty application is a two-step process:
