

WORKS IN THE WORKS: The Humanities Department

presents..... A Talk by Ann Delilkan

The Phonologist's Craft—and Obligation

After determining the number of meaning-creating sounds (also known as ‘phonemes’) in a language, generative phonologists aim to formulate the abstract rules understood by native speakers that govern how those sounds combine to generate words. In this presentation, I describe a set of such rules and outline the empirical testing that must follow their formulation, for them to have both scientific validity and real world value.

1:00pm, Thursday February 8th, 2018 in A631.

Faculty, Students and Staff are invited.