Performance and Protest in Saving the Whales

Beginning in the mid-1970s, Greenpeace's "Save the Whales" Campaign became a successful weapon against international whaling. Today, oceanic warming causes shifts in whale migration, uncertain feeding patterns, and the consequent loss of vitality. In this presentation, I investigate the efficacy of the "Save the Whales" campaign to see ways in which this potent combination of performance and protest might be re-deployed to combat the current threat.

1:00 pm, Thursday May 16th, 2019, in L631.
Faculty, Students, and Staff are invited.
